H. B. Sims Loses Commission in Aiken County After War on Law Breakers.

Aiken, May 15.-Following much activity as game warden, Hedgemon B. Sims of Warrenville, this county, has been discharged by the governor for his activity which followed a warning. Thereby hangs a tale. Horsecreek valley is astir.

The following letter was received by

"Mr. H. B. Sims, Warrenville, S. C.

"Dear Sir: It has been reported to this office that dynamiting and illegal selling of fish is going on in your neighborhood. This report has come through an official source, and if you don't act at once they will, and it is needless to say should they do so, I shall be forced to request your resignation. Wire me should you need any

Sims got to work immediately and spent a great deal of time lying in the swamps. The result was that he made cases by the wholesale against violators of the law. A few were tried and convicted. Others facing convictions were to have been tried before Magistrate Smoak yesterday. Coffee to Drink before Magistrate Smoak yesterday. The magistrate's office was filled to overflowing and some of those there were, they said, ready to plead guilty. When Sims appeared in the role of prosecutor he was shown a copy of a letter which Magistrate Smoak, Sheriff Howard and Clerk of Court. Dunbar had received yesterday morning bright and early, his own mall not having been called for before he left Warrenville to come to Aiken. The letter, addressed to Sims, was from the governor and read:

"On April 22, 1913, through misapprehension, you were appointed and commissioned a game warden for Aiken county, South Carolina. stated, you having been appointed game warden through misapprehension, your commission as such game warden is hereby revoked, and any further act or acts performed by you under said commission will be in violation of the law. Copy of this letter has been mailed to the secretary of state, clerk of court, Alken, S. C .; magistrate, Aiken, S. C.; magistrate.

To make assurance doubly sure that Sims did not prosecute the cases he had worked up, he was handed a telegram when he appeared in Magstrate Smook's office, where the messenger boy found him. It rend:

"May 13, 1914.

to honor the soldiers of the Confederacy with an annual dinner, a similar of the 60's. An old paper recently brought to light and handed to The Advertiser by Mr. J. N. Wright shows that the Revolutionary soldiers were recipients, once at least, of such honor almost a half century after the great conflict for freedom. Instead of a basket dinner, however, the Revolutionary soldiers met around a great barbecue tendered them by the men of the community. Listed among the things purchased for the occasion were various articles, such as beef, mutton, butter, etc., besides one item of 32 gallons of whiskey. Whiskey must have been either very cheap in those days or the gallant soldiers drank pretty raw stuff for that bought on this occasion cost but 45c a gallon. From the receipts among the papers could be gathered that T. F. Jones was the leading spirit of the day and that W. G. Davis was a sort of business manager.
